Social and Personal

A quiet but very interesting wedding ceremony took place yesterday afternoon at half-past 1 o'clock in the Church of the Centurion, Fort Monroe, when Miss Margarette Woods, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Meredith Woods, was married to William Congreve Jackson, of this city. The bride is a son of the late Bishop Henry Melville Jackson, of Alabama, and is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Pace, of this city. The church was decorated with candles and palms and the ceremony was performed by Chaplain Scott. The bride entered the church with her father, who gave her away. She wore a traveling suit of dark blue cloth, with an imported hat trimmed in bands of lilac fur, and carried a bouquet of lilacs of the valley and orchids. Her only ornament was a diamond horseshoe on the left of the groom, Miss Lucille Woods, who was her sister's maid of honor, wore a gown of hand-embroidered sapphire blue chiffon and carried an armful of American Beauty roses. John McMenamin was the groom's best man. Mr. and Mrs. Woods entertained the bridal party at a luncheon immediately following the ceremony at the church. The luncheon was given in the Chamberlayne Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson left later for New York, and will sail on December 19 for London. They will visit relatives in England and spend some time traveling. Guests from a distance attending the ceremony were James B. Pace, Miss Bessie Jackson, of Richmond; Mrs. Groner, of New York City, and others.

Gleske, at Catonsville. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. J. H. Gleske.

She makes it best who, looking after the culinary department, turns her back resolutely upon unhealthful, or even suspicious, food accessories. She is economical; she knows that true economy does not consist in the use of inferior meat, flour, or baking powder. ## ELPHINSTONE AGAIN IN BANKRUPTCY COURT

Cut Wide Swath at Newport and Later Landed in Jail at New York.

BY LA MARQUE DE MONTENOT.

ALEXANDER ELPHINSTONE has again appeared in the Bankruptcy Court in London; this time for a relatively small amount.

He is well known in this country, and many people will remember him as cutting a wide swath in Newport society under the name of "Lord Elphinstone," and claiming to be the son of that Lord Elphinstone who died at the battle of Bombay, but who was never married. He passed himself off while here as being still a captain in the crack Lancashire Regiment in which he at one time held a commission as subaltern and also proclaimed himself to be a King's foreign service messenger. He finally wound up in New York as a hotel beat, and after repeated arrests for similar offenses the authorities here came to the conclusion that he must be crazy, and consigned him to the institution for the insane on Blackwell's Island.

Having made this country too hot to hold him, Elphinstone returned to London, where in September, 1910, he was sentenced to a term of imprisonment on charges of fraud, including the obtaining of goods, money and credit, under false pretenses and a scattering of checks on banks when he not only had no funds, but was totally unknown. He is a good looking man, of excellent Scottish family, who on coming of age inherited a fortune of $250,000 from his father, which he promptly squandered.

At the time when he came to the United States and was received with open arms by people who would not take the trouble to make inquiries as to his record, he had jumped his bail in England, after having been committed for trial at the assizes on charges of larceny and fraud committed at Bournemouth and at Christchurch, in Hampshire.

He has been a source of no end of trouble to the real Lord Elphinstone, his distant kinsman, who has been so frequent a visitor to the United States himself, with many friends among the Vanderbilt and Whitney set in New York, that it is difficult to understand how people here can have ever mistaken the one for the other. Married to the eldest daughter of the Earl of Strathmore, Lord Elphinstone is a great traveler, is never so happy as when on some shooting or exploring expedition in the least known parts of the world, and can boast of being the only British peer of the realm who has ever managed to penetrate into Tibet. As the Earl Moore, he may be interested to add that his trophies of the chase at Carberry Tower include what is generally recognized as the record bull-moose head and antlers ever secured in Canada. His estates have been in his family ever since the reign of King David II, and his peerage dates from 1569, when it was bestowed upon Sir Alexander Elphinstone, who lost his life four years later in the battle of Flodden Field.

Carberry Tower, his principal country seat at Musselburgh, is perched on the west side of a hill which rises near the coast at a point where the River Esk flows into the Firth of Forth. Close by is the battle-field of Pinkie, where the second Lord Elphinstone fell. The tower is the scene of many a historic event. It was there that Mary Queen of Scots and Bothwell awaited the confederate bride and parted never to meet again, and it also figures in the famous ballad known as "Quincey's Revenge." The late Quinceys had at one time vast possessions in Scotland, but as they sided with the Balliols in the War of Succession, their estates were, on the accession of Bruce to the throne, forfeited to the crown and conferred on the Setons. The founder of the family fortunes seems to have been a Northamptonshire Baron Robert de Quincey, who acquired Traverston, the industrial mining town of today, soon after the accession of William the Lion, whose justice he was for years. It is his son, Seyer de Quincey, who is the hero of the ballad. History records that he set out for the Holy Land in 1218. According to the ballad, Seyer returns from Palestine to find that his kinsman and best friend, Sir Malcolm Caerbarrin, of Caerbarrin, or Carberry Tower, has played him false by making love to his betrothed, the Lady Elena Seton, and with the aid of evidence forged by a monk, has led her to believe in his having been killed in battle. Lady Elena, however, would not listen to Sir Malcolm Caerbarrin's wooing, but withers away and dies.

Seyer de Quincey arrives some days afterwards from the Holy Land, forces his way to the vault in New Battle Abbey, where his betrothed lies dead in her shroud, and finds his engagement ring still on her finger. Learning how Sir Malcolm had persecuted her with his attentions, he fought with him on the grounds around Carberry Tower, and wounded him mortally. A monk from New Battle Abbey is sent for in hot haste, to shroud the dying knight, and the priest in question happens to be the very Father Francis who had forged the document furnishing the false evidence of the Quinceys' death. On the road from the abbey to Carberry Tower, he is waylaid by Seyer, stripped of his monkish garb, and left tightly bound in Consland Dean.

Disguising himself in the monk's frock and cowl, de Quincey goes in his place to Carberry Tower and there hears the full confession of the treachery of Sir Malcolm, and learns that the latter's fellow conspirator was the regular meeting of the board of directors of the Young Women's Christian Association was held last Tuesday in the chapel of the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Miss Katharine H. Hays presiding. There was a full attendance and much enthusiasm expressed over the progress of the work.

A full financial statement will be given to the public in January, and in the meanwhile it was reported that the new building, home at 108 West Cary Street, is rapidly nearing completion and will be ready for use by March 1; that the administration building to be erected at 6 North Fifth Street has been unavoidably delayed by minor legal complications, but it is expected that ground will be broken before January 1.

The following condensed reports of the various committees give a general idea of the varied and efficient work being done:

Mrs. C. H. Uner, chairman of the traveling aid committee, reported a greivous work in publicity, employment and educational lines. One hundred and thirty-seven were assisted at stations and about the city, seventy-seven directed to boarding places, thirty applicants found positions, 105 calls were made, sixty-eight letters written, 213 interviews, and the office of Miss Helen E. Beardsley has now two able assistants, and Miss Mary E. Brandon takes charge of the employment work.

November Attendance 1,502.
Mrs. Thomas P. Ryan, chairman of the gymnasium committee, reported as follows: number enrolled in gymnasium classes, 258; number enrolled in the Methodist Mission, 20; number enrolled in the neighborhood class, 42; total number receiving instruction, 312. The attendance for November was 1,502, with 1,010 visitors. A walking club on Saturday afternoons adds to the interest, and enthusiasm runs high.

The membership committee, Mrs. W. C. James, chairman, reported definite work for December and a membership rally to be held January 2 at 8 in the evening at the gymnasium, corner Fourth and Cary Streets, to which all association members are invited and asked to bring one nonmember. The sustaining membership is nearing fifty, with others promised after January 1. The committee welcomed Miss Winifred G. Crenshaw as membership secretary.

The extension committee, with Mrs. Thomas H. Riggs as chairman, reported the organization of two competitive groups and outlined programs of work in different centers. The Messenger Club from Miller & Rhoads has doubled its numbers, and other clubs will be started after the holidays. Private instruction is being given to several girls who are not eligible to the night schools.

Mrs. John Garland Pollard reported as chairman of the religious committee.

The luncheon committee, under the leadership of Mrs. C. A. Blanton, announced a change of service—the discontinuance of the club lunches and the adoption of a la carte service—which it is believed will meet with favor. In order to give members a special privilege, lunch tickets will be sold to them.

The searchlight committee, under Miss Katharine Cross, is issuing a creditable little monthly paper, which keeps the members in touch with the association as a whole.

The association, though greatly hampered by lack of room and equipment, is making rapid strides and is meeting many needs of the city hitherto untouched.

National anthems have been playing a very important role in the war in the Balkans. For the races in South-eastern Europe have a passionate fondness for poetry and for music, and have in many cases marched on to the battlefield inspired by singing their national anthems. That of the Bulgars bears the title of "La Choum Maritza," which is the name of a river, on the banks of which one of their most famous battles against the Turks was fought, and its strophes express the ancient hatred of the Turk, and the yearning for freedom from his oppression. The national hymns of Serbia and of Montenegro are of a kindred character, and their music suggests military cadence and the marching of troops.

The national anthem of the Greeks was composed by the poet and patriot Denis Solomos, of Zante, during the course of the struggle for the liberation of Greece from Turkish rule, in which Lord Byron took part, in the second and third decades of the nineteenth century. Set to music, it is the most impressive anthem known, and glorifying the fight for liberation from the Turks, it has served ever since as a national anthem that never fails to stir the martial ardor and patriotism of those who sing it and of those who hear it.

Turkey has had two national anthems, one composed at the instance of Sultan Mahmoud IV, by the Italian composer Donizetti, brother of the author of "La Favorita," and director of that National Conservatory of Music at Constantinople founded by Selim III. But it was superseded during the reign of Sultan Abdul Hamid by an infinitely less impressive anthem, known as the "Hamidie," intended to glorify Abdul Hamid, and composed by one of the most conspicuous members of the old Yildiz Kiosque ring, Nedjib Pasha.
